The landscape of mental health treatment options is rapidly evolving. Increasingly, non-pharmacologic and other unique treatments are being developed. Event participants will learn about newer neuromodulation techniques that are becoming increasingly available to address mental health conditions that have been previously challenging to completely treat and how these differ from older neuromodulation techniques. Learners will also gain a better understanding of how the medical community can affect the laws that govern us and the care we provide through advocacy by using an example of legislation for the Collaborative Care Model in an interesting panel format. This will branch into a discussion of cannabis legalization and how it intersects with mental health treatment.
